ON THE OUTSIDE OF THIS PAGE.—First Page—Poetry.

It has often seemed to us that the habit of fault-finding was eminently an American failing, but possibly we may be mistaken, and in that case, we would be the last to censure without cause; but whether an American trait or an imported one, its evil effects and disagreeable consequences are fully as manifest, and require to be guarded against with equal diligence.

Why humanity is so quick to censure, and so slow to praise, is hard to tell; we all love to be well thought of, beyond a doubt, and a few words of praise from these whom we honor and respect, will frequently cause us the utmost happiness, although we may have been depressed and down-hearted, from causes which often occur in the life of every one, too numerous to mention.

The pleasure of finding fault with others, and consequently causing them unhappiness, appears to be the sole source and pastime of many who go about chuckling at the evident effect which their unpleasant and unheeded remarks often produce on the minds of their victims.

One reason why this habit is so general, is because we are educated to find fault; taught from our cradles, to be suspicious.

The grown members of a family, where there are little children, seldom use the caution that they should in speaking of others.

The faults (and they may be real faults) of their neighbors are dissected upon, their foibles dissected, and their eccentricities laughed at. The eyes of the little folks, thus grow watchful to notice every peculiarity, until insensibly to themselves, and wholly unthought of by their parents, they become fault-finders in miniature, and flaw-finders in everything.

It is a pitiable and crying evil, that this vice is so early given to the youthful imagination, for it is so much more lovely, and gives such delicate shades and touches to the character, to look on everybody's bright side.

And why is it not better to praise than to censure, even if the praise be not always genuine and sincere? In our humble opinion even flattery, heartless as it is at times, is far better calculated to do good than fault finding even where there is a possible reason for the latter.

We do wrong when we censure indiscriminately, for among both rich and poor, there are feeling hearts. Nay, we do wrong, when we censure at all. God has not delegated such power to us, and what he sanctions not, let us not dare to do.

The people of Newport are making preparations for a grand celebration of the 10th of September, the anniversary of Perry's victory on lake Erie. All the military in the State are to be invited, with all the rest of mankind in general.—New London Star.

In common with our neighbors generally, we are puzzled to define the whereabouts or the extent of any "preparations" of the character alluded to above. Undoubtedly a suggestion to the effect that some steps should be taken toward providing for a "celebration" of the 10th of September, was addressed to the "people of Newport," some two months since. Nothing could be more appropriate to ourselves, or more gratifying to all New England, than such an event, and although we sadly fear that up to this time utter indifference, and that alone, has been awarded the proposition under discussion, we are not entirely hopeless as to its final adiaption and success.

But now is the time for efforts in that direction to commence. Not a day should be lost.

A MISTAKE.—The newspaper paragraph now being published, saying the Bible on which Washington was initiated to be a Mason is now in England is a mistake. He was initiated in the Fredericksburgh (Va.) Lodge, No. 4, wherein he received the first three degrees, and was its master. The Bible still used in that Lodge is the one used at Washington's initiation.

How massive those helmets used in the days of Chivalry! To protect the head has ever been the universal desire. But when the beautiful covering from unavoidable causes is thin or lost, it may be restored by using Champlin's Xylophlorium Hair Restorative and Invigorator. To be obtained at R. J. Taylors.

The Buffalo Express tells us of a good story of a Quaker who was charged the exorbitant sum of seventeen dollars for a horse and buggy for a short drive, and upon being presented with the bill, remarked— "Thou mistakes me. I do not wish to purchase thy establishment, but only to hire it."

Out of the fifty-nine members of the Senate during the last Congress, less than five have already passed away, viz: Messrs. Clayton, of Delaware; Bell, of New Hampshire; Adams, of Mississippi; Butler, of South Carolina, and Bush of Texas.

Father Hughes, Catholic priest at Hartford, is doing a good work among the Irish. He goes about to the low groggeries of nights, learns the names of riotous men, and publishes them from the pulpit on Sunday. He hopes in a measure to stop the drinking and fighting.

French papers note the discovery at Polbrières, Louis Napoleon's residence, of an old Roman bath-room, with a bronze tap and pipe in such perfect preservation, that when the cock was turned the water came in immediately. It is supposed to be about 1400 years old.

A dog belonging to Sands, Nathans & Co's Circus, for which they refused $500 a week ago, died in a fit at Albany last week.

LOCAL NEWS.

THE LADY WHO FAINTS.—Certainly the English will never have, in that line, such nice inventions as the French. The following may be taken as superlative of the kind. One day in a law-suit before the Tribunal Correctional a handsome young lady smartly dressed, was called as a witness. The presiding judge asked her name, and then put the question concerning her profession; "I am fainting," answered Madame in her weakest tone. The gallant disciple of Themis told an officer of the Court to bring her a chair, and allowed sufficient time for recovering. Then "Be not afraid, madame," said he, "and please to tell me before you are sworn what is your profession?" "I am fainting," again whispered the pretty witness in a scarcely audible voice. This time the Vice President sent for a glass of water, the dame sipped it slowly, then bowed graciously to the judge, looked at him seemingly awaiting further questions. And again she was asked her profession. Wondering and amazed she answered, "But Monsieur le President, I had already twice the honor to tell you that my profession is to faint." "To faint?" exclaimed the beuch; "can that ever be a profession?" Madame answered in the affirmative, and explained that she gained a livelihood by going every evening in a fashionable dress, to a stall at the theatre de la Porte St. Martin, and fainting at the most tragic moment in the play. She added that her services were very valuable, and that the manager had never had to complain of the manner in which she performed her part. Unhappily by exposing thus publicly the profession of her occupation was lost.—Paris Letter.

CAPTAIN REUBEN PINE.—Captain Reuben Pine, of the Block Island ferry boat, was yesterday badly injured at the head of Market square. In company with Mr. John Irish, of this city, he was driving down Mill street at a rapid rate, when, in attempting to avoid another wagon, he was thrown from his own, dashing his head against the curbing of the sidewalk. Captain Pine's wounds were dressed by Dr. Butler, and at the last report, he was said by his physician to be severely hurt. We refrain from any moralizing upon "fast driving"—though a few words of that purport would not be far from amiss.

THE CONCERT OF MR. RUSSEL.—The concert of Mr. Russel at the Ocean Hall, 13th inst., was, beyond dispute, the finest entertainment of its kind which has taken place in Newport this season. The songs of the occasion were selected with a large degree of taste, and being generally familiar to the audience, possessed thereby a charm independent of the unrivalled manner of their execution.

"Life on the Ocean Wave," "Old Arm Chair," "Woodman Spare that Tree" and the "Song of the Shirt," are well-known and favorite airs wherever the English tongue prevails. The house was but thinly occupied—a circumstance which we deeply regretted, and at which, considering the fame of the vocalist, we were greatly surprised.

WE AGAIN CALL ATTENTION to the fact that the "Redwood Library" is daily open to visitors from 10 a. m. until 2 p. m. The directors of the institution extend to all a free and unqualified invitation to avail themselves of its facilities for reading, and for literary reference. The kindness of these gentlemen has been very marked, in thus placing the library so completely at public disposal.

TO MR. HELMSMILLER.—Of the Germanian Society, we offer our acknowledgments for a copy of "Quadrilles les Lanciers."—This piece of music or rather this collection of airs, has become deservedly popular in every quarter. The dance, for which it is arranged is certainly at once the most inspiring and the most dignified that we ever beheld.

THE EXTREME HEAT of yesterday absolutely forced hundreds of people down upon the beach, and then off into the surf. The Sea Shore was never a more universal resort than during the bathing hours of the 14th of August, 1857. Indeed, so thronged was Newport now with strangers, such a evident must seem the most natural in the world. Let those who like plenty of fun, and a rare season of pleasure and satisfaction bathe in the sea to-day.

MR. EDITOR:—We have been led to apprehend that the admirers of vocal music now congregated in this city will not be afforded, this season, the pleasure of hearing the world-renowned Cantatrice, Madame Anna de la Grange. Report states that the lady is at present residing in Newport, with the sole design of recruiting her health, and owing to no intention of appearing professionally in public. We earnestly wish, sir, to be favored with one concert, at least, under her auspices. May not our entreaty if seconded by her numerous admirers, procure for us all that much-craved gratification bath in the sea to-day.

A MISTAKE.—The newspaper paragraph now being published, saying the Bible on which Washington was initiated to be a Mason is now in England is a mistake. He was initiated in the Fredericksburgh (Va.) Lodge, No. 4, wherein he received the first three degrees, and was its master. The Bible still used in that Lodge is the one used at Washington's initiation.

Information has reached us that the Annual Benefit Concert and Soiree Danseante of the Germanian's, an event most anxiously desired by every visitor of Newport—takes place the latter part of next week. Further particulars stating the day and general arrangements of this musical exhibition will be given shortly.

We cannot state with certainty the height of temperature at 100° F. at the thermometer yesterday, but we are vastly mistaken if it did not surpass that of any previous day this summer. It is rarely come in immediately. It is supposed to be about 1400 years old.
